

CHAPTER CCXVL

HARI said:—To a cow, that shuns, or turns hostile to, her own calf, should be given her milk, duly milched and salted, whereby she would fondly take to her offspring Bits of dog's bones Itied round the neck of a cow or a cow-buffalo lead to the expulsion of vermins from her body. Gunji roots internally administered would bring about the castings of horns in horned cattle. External applications of the juice of Varuna-phalas, squeezed out with ths hand, would bring about the expulsion of vermins, fr Shiva, from the bodies of biped and quadruped animals. O Rudra, pourings of the expressed juice of Jaya would 'bring atjout the healing of ulcer^ in quadrupeds. The urine of a she-elephant internally administered would remove the bodily ailments of honed cattle. Lentil seeds arxd ShSH rice pasted with whey (Takram) and administered through the medium of cow or buffalo-milk would prove beneficial to bullocks. Sharpunkha leaves giv.en with salt would cure the belbous eruptions (V3ri-sphotam) in horses and bullocks. Ghritakumiri leaves given with salt would relieve itches in horses and bullocks.

CHAPTER CCXVII.

HARI said:—Take eight parts of Chitrakam, sixteen parts of Shurana, four parts of Sbunthi, two parts of Maricham,
three parts of Pippatimularrv, four of Vidanga, eight parts